

Beyond the CCL Program

Providers of Training and Professional Development

More Opportunities for Continuing Education

The Center for Continuous Learning (CCL) provides developmental opportunities throughout the year. We understand, however, that the CCL program cannot meet all the training needs of all DHHS staff members, so we have compiled a list of organizations which provide continuing education programs. These organizations provide the following services:

- Free Courses
- Web-Based Courses
- Classroom Courses
- Continuing Education Credits

These classes may be available locally, nationally or on the World Wide Web. Many provide training free or at a reasonable cost, and they provide Continuing Education credits approved by MBSWE, NBCC, NASW, ANA, CME and other boards.

Helpful Hints

Always confirm that the organization is “an approved provider of continuing education” by the appropriate credentialing board for your profession. Approved sponsors are required to post this on the website.

Technical difficulties should be addressed to that particular organization’s customer service/technical support contact.

As with all training outside the County programs, it is your responsibility to maintain a record of your training. The Office of Human Resources cannot maintain these records.
